Thousands of people have been forced to flee as wildfires encroached on their communities. Sadly, the flames have now reached the beloved and picturesque town of Jasper. Many residents are facing uncertainty and stress as they don't know if their home is still standing or what their next day will look like.

In Northern Alberta, fires are also threatening Indigenous communities, including three communities under the governance of Little Red River Cree Nation.

The Canadian Red Cross is working closely with governments, Indigenous leadership and local communities to provide assistance to those in need. Our teams are currently on the ground in Edmonton, supporting people with aid such as emergency lodging and basic needs.

Your support will help us deliver urgent aid to people impacted by this disaster. And we stand ready to provide additional support in response to the current wildfires, as well as to future fires that may occur during this wildfire season in Alberta.

Please give today to help individuals, families and communities impacted by the wildfires in Alberta.

HOW YOUR SUPPORT COULD HELP

Financial Assistance

Give emergency financial assistance so families can purchase necessities like food, clothing, and fuel.

Relief Supplies

Provide relief supplies like Hygiene Kits and After-the-Fire Kits to support evacuees.

Emotional Support

Provide psychosocial support to evacuees coping with loss and hardship
